Who can apply for the Fund's assistance:
Beneficiaries of the Fund include anyone in the news-reporting business who finds themselves in financial straits as a result of work-related reasons such as:
- forced exile due to threats at home;
- litigation needing help with legal fees;
- medical expenses for injured journalists;
- travel costs to cover journeys to safety.

Countries of Past Beneficiaries
The IFJ Safety Fund has helped journalists and media personnel from many countries including: Albania, Algeria, Angola, Bangladesh, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Burundi, Cameroon, Cambodia, Colombia, Democratic Republic of Congo, Croatia, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Georgia, Ghana, Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Israel, Liberia, Kenya, Mongolia, Nepal, Nigeria, Pakistan, Paraguay, Peru, Romania, Russia, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Tajikistan, Togo, Uganda, Venezuela, Botswana, Zimbabwe and Zambia.

Conditions for Humanitarian Assistance
In order to receive financial assistance, the applicant's case must meet the following conditions:
- a genuine need for legal, medical, security and living expenses;
- an emergency situation related to the practice of journalism;
- lack of alternative source of income to help meet needs;
- the claim has to be supported to the extent possible, by IFJ affiliates familiar with the case.

How to apply
The request for assistance has to be submitted, with supporting evidence, to the IFJ regional offices in the applicant’s region, or directly to the IFJ Human Rights and Communications Officer in Brussels. The application is assessed and a proposal is submitted to the IFJ General Secretary who can:
- approve the request and allocate, ex officio, the grant to be given (for any amount up to 1000 EUR);
- seek approval of the Safety Board (for amounts over 1000 EUR);
- decline the request on valid reasons.

Upon the request’s approval, the Human Rights Officer informs the applicant and/or, when applicable, the affiliate of the decision and agrees with them the most efficient means of sending the funds to the beneficiary.

The beneficiary is also requested to complete, sign and return the IFJ receipt form which is sent with the notification of the funds' transfer.

IFJ affiliates which agree to administer funding locally are also requested to complete the form and return it on behalf of the beneficiary.

Conditions for Humanitarian Assistance
In order to receive financial assistance, the applicant’s case must meet the following conditions:
- a genuine need for legal, medical, security and living expenses;
- an emergency situation related to the practice of journalism;
- lack of alternative source of income to help meet needs;
- the claim has to be supported to the extent possible, by IFJ affiliates familiar with the case.

The IFJ is a member of the Journalists in Distress Network, a group of press freedom and freedom of expression organizations which run programmes of humanitarian assistance to journalists and writers. The JID network includes:
- Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) www.cpj.org
- Reporters Without Borders (RSF) www.rsf.org
- The Rory Peck Trust www.rorypecktrust.org
- Canadian journalists for Free Expression www.cjfe.org
- International PEN www.internationalpen.org.uk
- Front Line www.frontlinedefenders.org
- International Media Support (IMS) www.ims.org
- International Press Institute (IPI) www.freemedia.at
- Journalists Helping Journalists www.journalistenhelfen

The request for assistance has to be submitted, with supporting evidence, to the IFJ regional offices in the applicant’s region, or directly to the IFJ Human Rights and Communications Officer in Brussels. The application is assessed and a proposal is submitted to the IFJ General Secretary who can:
- approve the request and allocate, ex officio, the grant to be given (for any amount up to 1000 EUR);
- seek approval of the Safety Board (for amounts over 1000 EUR);
- decline the request on valid reasons.

Upon the request’s approval, the Human Rights Officer informs the applicant and/or, when applicable, the affiliate of the decision and agrees with them the most efficient means of sending the funds to the beneficiary.

The beneficiary is also requested to complete, sign and return the IFJ receipt form which is sent with the notification of the funds' transfer.

IFJ affiliates which agree to administer funding locally are also requested to complete the form and return it on behalf of the beneficiary.

The IFJ is a member of the Journalists in Distress Network, a group of press freedom and freedom of expression organizations which run programmes of humanitarian assistance to journalists and writers. The JID network includes:
- Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) www.cpj.org
- Reporters Without Borders (RSF) www.rsf.org
- The Rory Peck Trust www.rorypecktrust.org
- Canadian journalists for Free Expression www.cjfe.org
- International PEN www.internationalpen.org.uk
- Front Line www.frontlinedefenders.org
- International Media Support (IMS) www.ims.org
- International Press Institute (IPI) www.freemedia.at
- Journalists Helping Journalists www.journalistenhelfen

The request for assistance has to be submitted, with supporting evidence, to the IFJ regional offices in the applicant’s region, or directly to the IFJ Human Rights and Communications Officer in Brussels. The application is assessed and a proposal is submitted to the IFJ General Secretary who can:
- approve the request and allocate, ex officio, the grant to be given (for any amount up to 1000 EUR);
- seek approval of the Safety Board (for amounts over 1000 EUR);
- decline the request on valid reasons.

Upon the request’s approval, the Human Rights Officer informs the applicant and/or, when applicable, the affiliate of the decision and agrees with them the most efficient means of sending the funds to the beneficiary.

The beneficiary is also requested to complete, sign and return the IFJ receipt form which is sent with the notification of the funds' transfer.

IFJ affiliates which agree to administer funding locally are also requested to complete the form and return it on behalf of the beneficiary.

The IFJ is a member of the Journalists in Distress Network, a group of press freedom and freedom of expression organizations which run programmes of humanitarian assistance to journalists and writers. The JID network includes:
- Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) www.cpj.org
- Reporters Without Borders (RSF) www.rsf.org
- The Rory Peck Trust www.rorypecktrust.org
- Canadian journalists for Free Expression www.cjfe.org
- International PEN www.internationalpen.org.uk
- Front Line www.frontlinedefenders.org
- International Media Support (IMS) www.ims.org
- International Press Institute (IPI) www.freemedia.at
- Journalists Helping Journalists www.journalistenhelfen

The request for assistance has to be submitted, with supporting evidence, to the IFJ regional offices in the applicant’s region, or directly to the IFJ Human Rights and Communications Officer in Brussels. The application is assessed and a proposal is submitted to the IFJ General Secretary who can:
- approve the request and allocate, ex officio, the grant to be given (for any amount up to 1000 EUR);
- seek approval of the Safety Board (for amounts over 1000 EUR);
- decline the request on valid reasons.

Upon the request’s approval, the Human Rights Officer informs the applicant and/or, when applicable, the affiliate of the decision and agrees with them the most efficient means of sending the funds to the beneficiary.

The beneficiary is also requested to complete, sign and return the IFJ receipt form which is sent with the notification of the funds' transfer.

IFJ affiliates which agree to administer funding locally are also requested to complete the form and return it on behalf of the beneficiary.

The IFJ is a member of the Journalists in Distress Network, a group of press freedom and freedom of expression organizations which run programmes of humanitarian assistance to journalists and writers. The JID network includes:
- Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) www.cpj.org
- Reporters Without Borders (RSF) www.rsf.org
- The Rory Peck Trust www.rorypecktrust.org
- Canadian journalists for Free Expression www.cjfe.org
- International PEN www.internationalpen.org.uk
- Front Line www.frontlinedefenders.org
- International Media Support (IMS) www.ims.org
- International Press Institute (IPI) www.freemedia.at
- Journalists Helping Journalists www.journalistenhelfen

Who can apply for the Fund's assistance:
Beneficiaries of the Fund include anyone in the news-reporting business who finds themselves in financial straits as a result of work-related reasons such as:
- forced exile due to threats at home;
- litigation needing help with legal fees;
- medical expenses for injured journalists;
- travel costs to cover journeys to safety.

Countries of Past Beneficiaries
The IFJ Safety Fund has helped journalists and media personnel from many countries including: Albania, Algeria, Angola, Bangladesh, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Burundi, Cameroon, Cambodia, Colombia, Democratic Republic of Congo, Croatia, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Georgia, Ghana, Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Israel, Liberia, Kenya, Mongolia, Nepal, Nigeria, Pakistan, Paraguay, Peru, Romania, Russia, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Tajikistan, Togo, Uganda, Venezuela, Botswana, Zimbabwe and Zambia.

Conditions for Humanitarian Assistance
In order to receive financial assistance, the applicant’s case must meet the following conditions:
- a genuine need for legal, medical, security and living expenses;
- an emergency situation related to the practice of journalism;
- lack of alternative source of income to help meet needs;
- the claim has to be supported to the extent possible, by IFJ affiliates familiar with the case.

The IFJ is a member of the Journalists in Distress Network, a group of press freedom and freedom of expression organizations which run programmes of humanitarian assistance to journalists and writers. The JID network includes:
- Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) www.cpj.org
- Reporters Without Borders (RSF) www.rsf.org
- The Rory Peck Trust www.rorypecktrust.org
- Canadian journalists for Free Expression www.cjfe.org
- International PEN www.internationalpen.org.uk
- Front Line www.frontlinedefenders.org
- International Media Support (IMS) www.ims.org
- International Press Institute (IPI) www.freemedia.at
- Journalists Helping Journalists www.journalistenhelfen

Who can apply for the Fund's assistance:
Beneficiaries of the Fund include anyone in the news-reporting business who finds themselves in financial straits as a result of work-related reasons such as:
- forced exile due to threats at home;
- litigation needing help with legal fees;
- medical expenses for injured journalists;
- travel costs to cover journeys to safety.

Countries of Past Beneficiaries
The IFJ Safety Fund has helped journalists and media personnel from many countries including: Albania, Algeria, Angola, Bangladesh, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Burundi, Cameroon, Cambodia, Colombia, Democratic Republic of Congo, Croatia, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Georgia, Ghana, Gambia, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Israel, Liberia, Kenya, Mongolia, Nepal, Nigeria, Pakistan, Paraguay, Peru, Romania, Russia, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Tajikistan, Togo, Uganda, Venezuela, Botswana, Zimbabwe and Zambia.

Conditions for Humanitarian Assistance
In order to receive financial assistance, the applicant’s case must meet the following conditions:
- a genuine need for legal, medical, security and living expenses;
- an emergency situation related to the practice of journalism;
- lack of alternative source of income to help meet needs;
- the claim has to be supported to the extent possible, by IFJ affiliates familiar with the case.

The IFJ is a member of the Journalists in Distress Network, a group of press freedom and freedom of expression organizations which run programmes of humanitarian assistance to journalists and writers. The JID network includes:
- Committee to Protect Journalists (CPJ) www.cpj.org
- Reporters Without Borders (RSF) www.rsf.org
- The Rory Peck Trust www.rorypecktrust.org
- Canadian journalists for Free Expression www.cjfe.org
- International PEN www.internationalpen.org.uk
- Front Line www.frontlinedefenders.org
- International Media Support (IMS) www.ims.org
- International Press Institute (IPI) www.freemedia.at
- Journalists Helping Journalists www.journalistenhelfen
Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.

Who can apply for the Fund’s assistance:

Benefits of the Fund include assistance in the news-reporting business which finds themselves in travail and strives to report the truth of their day-to-day work. As guardians of the public interest, journalists and the people who work with them are not trouble makers, nor are they seeking to be heroes. Their job is to follow a story, get the facts and accurately report what is happening.

The IFJ Safety Fund was established in January 1992, provides a lifeline to colleagues around the world who experience violence, threats and injury as a result of the work they do, ensuring help is on hand when needed most.

The IFJ Safety Fund is funded by journalists and their families. The Fund provides humanitarian assistance and solidarity to journalists and media professionals everywhere, whether or not they are members of IFJ affiliates.